of humanity by American scienactor of humanity by American scien-ists and engineers, Guglielmo Marconi rill sail for home to-day. Late in the fternoon his yacht, the Elettra, now fternoon his yacht, the Elettra, now ying off Eighty-sixth street in North lying off Eighty-sixth street in North iver, will up anchor and point her nose down the harbor bound for the Azores Islands, the first stop on the long voy-

The trip will, as usual, be devoted to wireless experimenting with emphasis on radio telephony and on Marconi's unceasing battle with that great obstacle to all radio effort—static. During the first few days at sea and until the distance makes further experimenting of this nature impossible the inventor will talk by radio telephone with the Conte Rosso, the new flagship of the Licyd Sabaudo Line which sailed from New York on Thursday. The radio telephone set of the Conte Rosso was installed under Marconi's personal supervision and the inventor expects by this latest experiment to go a long way toward determining to what extent the radio telephone may be put to practical use by ships at sea. At present he hopes to keep in touch with the Conte Rosso by this method until the two ships are 500 miles apart, but it is possible that communication over an even greater distance will be found possible.

No attempt was made by Marconi yesterday to keep in touch with the Conte Rosso, the explanation being made that until the Elettra is at sea and her engines running the range of her radio apparatus is limited.

Through his secretary Senator Marconi said yesterday that he had made no arrangements to keep in contact while at sea with stations in America other than to send a few messages of farewell to friends and acquaintances by radio telegraph.

The second of a series of articles by a trained reporter who lived its experiences

Some time ago the literary adviser of a leading publishing house suggested that one American whose autobiography was sure to be both important and entertaining was Edward W. Townsend. That inspired the series of articles now appearing in the Magazine and Book Section of The New York Herald. There was a time when Mr. Townsend was the most talked of author in the United States, and when his Chimmie Fadden was as widely known as Martin Dooley afterward became.

Giving Cleopatra

a Square Deal

Georg Brandes, the famous

Danish critic and historian, finds that the Egyptian queen was the victim of the scandal mongers of Rome, of Cicero,

Augustus and the poets and envious women of the day. Brandes comes to the conclusion that Cleopatra was a woman "of very great merit."

An interesting article in the Magazine and Book Section

When Rudyard Kipling arrived in San Francisco as a young man, he considered California not in the light of a State or a civilization, but as the background of the Harte stories. Where and what were Sandy Bar, Tackass Flat. and the other strangely named mining camps of the early fifties? Read about them in the Magazine and Book Section of to-morrow's Herald.
